(Cheers)
Mr. Clar begged leave to introduce a sentiment which he had omitted in his address:—
"The True Union.—To Benton, to Bryant, to Seward, to Greeley, to Garrison, to Phillips, to Quincy—the union of all the opponents of the propagazda of slavery."

Section of the control of the contro treasury contained a large amount of money, you might as well reek to obtain a portion of it as not? A. It never occurred to me in the world; the bill was made out because I knew it to be correct, and I was satisfied that it the institution had been successful it would have been paid without any legal controversy; I have no doubt of this in my mind; I have been asked whether I was unfriendly with Mr. Austin, and gave several reasons; I wish to explain, in regard to the conduct of Mr. Austin, that Mr. Correns, Mr. Austin, and some other members of the Committee of Managament, have purchased foreign productions, coarrery to the constitution, charter and byels ws of the institution. This was an additional reason why I suspected the integrity of Mr. Austin and others connected with him; those works of art were purchased from Williams & Stephenr, residing, I believe, at 253 Broadway, and afterwards sent to Boston to be disposed of, and that the institution met with a less by the operation; I also know that Mr. Austin had sold his own purchases of works of art—his own property—to the Art Union at a price far above their value; Mr. Austin and Mr. Corzens told me that Gen. Wetmore gave his check for $1.200, which Mr. Austin said Gol. Warner had improperly charged; I wish to explain further in an awer to a question whether I had made a tatement that Mr. Jarris and Mr. Benedict were present at the same time stated that I never said so. In regard to the letter, which has been introduced in evidence, addressed to A. Mr. Cozzens, dated August 12, 1852, I wish to state that the institution was indebted to me for advances made by me, and that being shortly after quarter day, when the landorts look for their rents; I gave a letter in order to propitiate Mr. Austin; I wanted the money, and General Wetmore called on Mr. Austin, and Mr. Austin felt hurt that I had slandered the Institution, Gen. Wetmore said I was mistaken in George's character, as he called him, and that he would go around and see him, and he satisfied me, and u chooses.

Mr. Fullerton—Then I ask if it is dealing justly with those on trial; to excuse this witness from answering the question put? We court the investigation, and I shall press the same inquiry if the other side do not. This spurious modesty is intended to pass for more than it is worth.

worth.

Witness—I will answer: it was Col. Andrew Warner.

Q.—While you were clerk in the Art Union had you not charge of the receipts of the institution from the members?

Q—While you were clerk in the Art Union had you not charge of the rescipts of the institution from the members?

A—I had.
Q—During what years?
A—From about lat August, 1849, to, I think, the close of 1850 or 1851.
Q—What were the amounts of the receipts from members of that institution during the year 1849.
A—In the year 1859 the receipts were $4,200.78; in the year 1840, $5,927.47; in the year 1841, $5,205.57; in the year 1840, $5,927.47; in the year 1841, $5,205.57; in the year 1842 the receipts were $5,883.70; in the year 1843, $7,129; in the year 1849, $10,080.90; in the year 1843, $7,129; in the year 1849, $22,293. The receipts in 1851 were about $60,000; there was no drawing in that year, for the pictures were sold.
Q—What became of those receipts?
A—I received a portion of them in liquidation of my claim against the institution; all the funds received it was necessary to place in the hands of the Treasurer, according to the emphatic language of the constitution, charter and by laws of the American Art Union that is, as far as I know, but I have no doubt of the fact.
A—In what manner were the paintings for distribution purchased by the Committee of Management, and of whom?
A.—There was a deal of partiality shown in latter years, in regard to those purchases, against which I strenuously protested.
Q—State during what years and in what that partiality consisted?
A—In the latter years of the prospectly of the lastitu consisted?

A —In the latter years of the prosperity of the lastitution Mr. Austin, the Tressurer, would occasionally bria a ploture of his own purchase, and sell it to the institution as the work of art of the artist who painted it. Mr. Austin would fill up a check, or draft, payable 'to bearer,' instead pf 'to order,' and thus reimburse himself, and it would appear as though the paynect had been made to the artist direct, instead of to Mr. Austin himself, for the injudicious purchases which he might have made; Mr. Austin would occasionally purchase from Williams & Stapens, in Breadway, and others, many works of art. Also from J. C. Bingham, of Missouri. Afterwards, being tired or dissatisfied with them, these works of art have been pat on the catalogue of distribution of the Art Union: and, instead of Mr. Austin being the patron of the artist the Art Union had to foot the bills. Mr. J. W. Glass, of London, has sold many works of art to the institution—he not being an American, as I have understoed—to the exclusion of purchases which would otherwise have been made from American artists—that American artists born and residing here, and having the most popular pictures in the sallery have been thwarted and opposed ingtheir efforts to sell the same to the Art Union. Great partiality has been shown to members who were artists of the Century Club, of which Mr. Conzens, the president, was a member, in the purchase of pictures, to the exclusion of other artists who had equal claims upon the Art Union, and who were not members of the Century Club: I do not want to say superior, but, at least, equal. I wish to state further, that in 1850 or 1851, the National Academy of Design had in contemplation, as I have been informed by one of the officers, for the purpose of relieving that institution from embarrasament, to have a distribution, or disposition of pictures and that Mr. Conzens, fearful that that mode would become popular, and interfere with the prosperity of the Art Union, purchasel, with the assent of the committee, before or afterwards obtained many works of art many of which works of art had previously been declined by the Art Union

A.—I think there was, decidedly.

Q.—State in what that partially consisted, and to whom?

A.—Artists who would either pay court to the President, Mr. Cozzess, and other managers, or those who would denounce or threaten the committee for acting with partiality, and talk pretty loud—they would generally have a better "lock" than the artists who were timid and modest; I have known as many, I think, as fourteen pictures purclased from an artist residing in London at the time, and who I understood at the time from the committee as not being a naturalized citizen or resident artist, as a matter of course to the exclusion of meritorious American and resident artists.

Mr. Clapp—State to whom this partiality was shown.

A.—I have known a meritorious artist to receive less than the value of his production, merely because he was poor and compelled to receive it—that was during the administration of Mr. Cerzens. Gen. Wetmore was always liberal to the artists; I have known members of the committee to purcl ane works of art and pay by drafts on time, and shave the same at the rate of one and one and a half.

Mr. Fullerton—Who got them shaved?

A.—The members of the committee would do so.

Mr. Clapp—Did they do so as individuals—as members of the committee-or as citizens?

A.—Individually; I know from my own knowledge that Col. Wa ner discounted some of these drafts.

Q.—In the reports that were made to the public and the members by the committee of the Art Union was there any statement made of the price paid by them for the pictures respectively obtained for distribution?

A.—No, sir, not to my knowledge, and contrary to my belief; they did not publish anything.

The examination in chief here closed, and the committee stands adjourned until Monday morning at 10 A. M. The reason of the adjournment until Monday was the unexpected call of a member to visit his family.
